Once upon a time, in the small village of Hartington, a boy was playing near a river when something caught his eyes. It was a shimmering light that called him from the depths of the water. Hypnotized by it, he dived in to get it. He finally found the source of the light, it was the portrait of a woman. He got out and saw the woman smiling, but he would have sworn that it showed no expressions under the water. He was walking back home when he felt something painful on his back, the woman had disappeared, suddenly the object came out of his chest. Nobody saw him again...
