It was a stormy night, the cementery was painted with tears and darkness. I would have never imagined that so many people had assisted to my own funeral. But, I wasn't really dead. I had been shouting for hours, searching for help, nobody had come to ~~rescue~~ rescue me. My eyes were wet of the fear of dying alone. I fought with the dirt and grass above me, until my hand felt the water falling from the sky and the cold. As soon as I escaped of my ~~jail made jail me~~ prision made of wood, I looked to the people there. I have never seen ~~those people~~ any of them. Why were they there? An old woman with dirty clothes smiled at me, ~~and pointed to my~~ I was full of anger, my sight went blurry. I wasn't dead, I wasn't dead. I was dead! ~~Then I saw him.~~ My eyes laid on him.
