New case of domestic violence in Spain

The police take a youth from Valencia into custody after the parents of his girlfriend reported him for domestic violence.

his spell. They met, started going out together and then he turned her against her friends and family, which is the typical behaviour of individuals with this type of profile", confirmed the police officer (L.A.) in charge of the investigation.

M.C. believed she had everything under control until the day R.A. lifted a hand to her because he saw that she had had a conversation with a friend on Whatsapp. He accused her of cheating on him, insulted her and hit her. "When she got home I didn't think twice. I knew I had to report him", M.C.'s mother told us with tears in her eyes.

Now R.A. is at the disposition of the domestic abuse court in Valencia. Miradas (The Association of Women Victims of Domestic Abuse) recommends being aware of this type of abusive behaviour, which can occur in underage couples on social networking sites, and reporting it as soon as possible, so that, as in this case, it can be detected and stopped in time.

SELF-EVALUATION TABLE

■ Put a ✓ in the box which corresponds to your online behaviour:

- 1. I do it sometimes. I must always do it!
- 2. I almost always do it, but I must always do it!
- 3. I always do it! I'm safe online!

I follow this advice to avoid sextorsion:	1	2	3
I know that my online conversations can be recorded.
Never take intimate photos or make compromising videos or let people take or make them of you.
Don't let yourself be fooled by strangers; appearances aren't always what they seem.
Never share personal information online.
Don't agree to the blackmailer's demands; it will only make them ask for more.
Save the evidence! If the blackmailer threatens you, save the messages with the day and time they were sent.
Cover your camera when you're not using it.
Always use an anti-virus on your devices.
Inform blackmailers that they are committing a crime and that you will report them.
Use the options to report blackmailers on the social networking sites and on your apps if you are being blackmailed.
If someone blackmails you, block them or delete them from your contact list.
If you experience sextorsion, talk about it to a responsible adult and report it.

A PARTNER WHO DOESN'T COMMIT DATING ABUSE IS A PARTNER WHO:

- A young girl with blonde hair is looking at a tablet screen. The screen displays a list of 12 points. The background of the list is a dark, semi-transparent overlay over the image of the girl.

  3. Listens to my opinions.
  4. Accepts that I have my own life.
  5. Makes me feel good about myself.
  6. Trusts me.
