INFORMATION ABOUT PURCHENA

IES Entresierras is a small high school, located in the southeastern Spanish town called Purchena, in the province of Almería. Studying at our school is almost familiar, since there are little more than 130 students and 30 teachers. Most of them are from Purchena and nearer towns, although we have an important migrant community that enriches our school environment.

Our students study here during four scholar years, since they are from 12 years old until 16. For that reason, every class is like a family. Our twelve participants are enrolled at the third grade of the Secondary School and they have been together in class for three years. Some of them are from other towns like Sierro, Somontín and Urrácal.

Purchena is a small town in the province of Almería, located in the autonomous community of Andalusia, southern Spain. With a rich historical heritage, the town has roots dating back to the Moorish period, as it was an important settlement during Al-Andalus. The old town preserves remnants of its past, including the ruins of an ancient fortress and the Church of San Ginés, which was built on the site of a former mosque.

Surrounded by mountains and picturesque landscapes, Purchena offers a peaceful atmosphere and a connection to nature. The town is known for its traditional festivals, such as the Moorish Games of Aben Humeya, a cultural event that recreates medieval games and traditions. Agriculture, particularly olive and almond cultivation, plays a vital role in its economy.
