

The Parthenon uses the golden ratio as a design element in its construction. If we take the height as the initial element, giving it the value 1, we will see that the frontal base is 1.61803398..., that is, the frontal base is the height multiplied by Φ .

